

Gavra Andromachi

From 2009 until today I work at the Hellenic Association of Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders as a Psychologist, performing non-pharmaceutical interventions through art. I have studied psychology at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki and I have continued with postgraduate studies on social and clinical psychology at the same university. I have been trained with annual training programs on art therapy, group psychotherapy and health unit management. I have participated in various voluntary programs, such as the State Hospital of Leros, "Arsis" and the support line 13306 for Covid 19 disease of the Psychargos program. I am fluent in English and Italian and I regularly attend photography and art history seminars. I have attended numerous conferences on dementia and psychology in general and in several of them I have been a speaker.
