Karpodini Claire Chrysanthi

Claire Karpodini is a dance scientist and fully qualified dance teacher specialized in classical ballet with deep academic knowledge and experience in the dance field. Her background extends across Performing Arts, Dance Education and Science. Claire trained as dancer and dance teacher specialized in classical ballet. She also studied Dance Education at University of Surrey (BA) and Dance Science (2012-2014) at University of Wolverhampton, UK (MSc). She graduated with distinction and awarded with the "Dean's prize for excellence in Masters performance". She has participated in several open talks and conferences such as Kalamata Dance Festival and EEVFA. She is currently a PhD student and her research focuses on links between Parkinson disease and the restorative capacity of dance and rhythmic movement.