

Solias Andreas

Andreas Solias is a social worker at the Municipality of Ilion, Attica, Greece since 2006. He received the Diploma of Social Worker from the Technological Educational Institute of Athens (1992) and his master's degree in Promotion of Mental Health -Prevention of Psychiatric Disorders, from the Medical School of National and Kapodestrian University of Athens (2012). He is a PhD candidate in the Social Work School of the Democritus University of Thrace (2021 – today) Also he has been Deputy Secretary General at the Hellenic Red Cross (2010-2013). He has worked at the Therapeutic Communities for Drug Addicts (1988 – 1994) and the Hellenic Red Cross (1995 – 2006). His main research interests include a) mild and major neurocognitive disorders, b) the development of computerized screening tests, c) Electroencephalograms and eye-tracking signals, d) anxiety and affective disorders in older adults. He is also interested in research and clinical work with drug -addicts, the homeless, unemployed people and volunteerism. His involvement in these areas has led to the author of 10 papers in international journals and conferences.

