

Theodosopoulou Danai

Danai Theodosopoulou (PhD) I am a social worker by background, now working as a research fellow at Nottingham University, exploring aspects of person-centred care in the acute hospitals for people living with dementia. I've completed my PhD at University of East Anglia. My thesis explores the use of personalised music interventions and the impact on autobiographical memory. PhD Title: "Music and autobiographical memory: how an analysis of Desert Island Discs may help conceptualise personalised music interventions for people living with dementia".
