

Tsentidou Glykeria

Glykeria Tsentidou is a Psychologist, graduate of AUTH, while her master is in Clinical Neuropsychology from the Medical School of the University of Athens. This year she completes her doctoral studies in the Department of Psychology at Aristotle University on the subject of the prognosis of mild cognitive impairment, for her doctoral thesis she has received a scholarship from the State Scholarship Foundation. She has been working for the last ten years as a psychologist, having tried several structures and contexts (Older Facilities, Schools, Mental Health Center, post-secondary education), as a result of which she has a lot of experience both in assessment, interventions and education. She is also trained in Cognitive Analytic Psychotherapy, having also worked as a psychotherapist. In recent years, she has published parts of her thesis in prestigious scientific journals while at the same time teaching at the Metropolitan College in undergraduate and postgraduate departments. Her great love is research and she wishes to deal with it in the future.
