

Vasiloglou Maria

I am a graduate of the Psychology department of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. I belong to the scientific team of the Hellenic Society of Alzheimer's Disease from 2005 until today and I work as a psychologist in the treatment unit for Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, St Helen. I was the coordinator of the EENASD Day Center at the Chariseio Nursing Home of Thessaloniki. My professional experience consists in the daily neuropsychological assessment of elderly people by administering various neuropsychological scales and evaluating the elderly's performance on them. I have also implemented various mental strengthening therapeutic programs and have contributed to their planning. I have participated in various seminars, conferences and research papers related to dementia aimed at healthcare professionals. For the last year I have been in the residential care team where I provide the neuropsychological assessment and palliative care of the patient as well as the psychoeducation and support of the carer on practical issues of care.
