

Banias Drosos Sotirios

Drosos Sotirios Banias was born in Athens in 1991. After completing his high school education, he moved to the USA for his studies, where he graduated in 2016 with a Bachelor's degree in Applied Psychology from the City University of Seattle. Additionally, he obtained a Master's degree in Cognitive Neuropsychology from the University of East London in 2024. He has participated as a keynote speaker in several scientific conferences, including: the 3rd Interdisciplinary Conference "The Borders of Sexuality," the 4th Interdisciplinary Sexology Conference, the 4th Interdisciplinary Conference on Brain and Mind, and the 5th Interdisciplinary Conference on Brain and Mind. In terms of professional experience, he provided mental health services in elderly care units, focusing on supporting patients with cognitive and emotional disorders, collaborating with families to provide holistic care, and implementing emotional and cognitive rehabilitation programs. In 2019, he served as a health psychologist during his military service at the 251 General Air Force Hospital. Since 2021, he has been a Neuropsychologist at the Modern Neurofeedback Center in Athens. His clinical work involves the investigation and intervention in cases of ADHD, cognitive decline, and emotional disorders, the development of individualized therapeutic protocols, the use of neurofeedback tools, as well as the analysis and interpretation of Quantitative EEG.

