

Fitsioris Sotirios

Mr. Sotirios Fitsioris is a graduate of the Faculty of Law of Democritus University of Thrace. University of Thrace. Since 2019, he has been practicing law independently with specialization in criminal law. He holds a master's degree specializing in "International Protection of Human Rights" (DUTH, 2023). He speaks fluently the English and Russian languages. He is particularly concerned with issues related to living conditions and the protection of vulnerable social groups, as well as the provision of legal protection and assistance. He actively participates in various events and is actively involved in actions aimed at providing assistance to underprivileged individuals. Engaging with dementia and dementia patients is one of his main areas of interest and has been for a long time, given that providing help and support to those in need is a primary humanitarian duty. The protection of human rights is an ongoing process that requires the active participation of states, society, citizens, and international organizations to ensure the protection of the rights of all people.

