

Galani Alexandra

I graduated from the Department of Psychology, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences of the University of Western Macedonia. From the new academic year, I am going to study the Master Program in Neuropsychology and Cognitive Neuroscience of Aegean College in collaboration with the University of Essex. I worked as a camp counselor and I have first aid certificate and a very good knowledge of English. During my undergraduate studies, I was invited to work individually and in groups in research and writing, fields with which I would like to pursue in the future. I acquired knowledge and skills from different disciplines of Psychology and the ones which I recognized more were Clinic Psychology and Neuropsychology. My interest was intensified due to thesis which I undertook to process on the subject of "Assessing global cognitive function in older adults with computerized self-administered and conventional examiner-administered cognitive tests". I have attended various seminars within and outside the University and my internship was conducted at the Community Center of the Municipality of Florina, in which I was informed about the principles of counseling process in vulnerable groups and the role of social services in child protection.
